A BRIEF HISTORY OF SCHERAS

Schera's was established in November 2006 by Frederique Boudouani and Brian Bruening. Previously in Boston, they settled in Elkader after learning of its connection with Algeria. Frederique, whose father is Algerian and mother is French, discovered that a town in Iowa was named after Emir Abd-el-Kader. The Emir is an Algerian national hero who fought against the French occupation of his country in the mid-1800s. One of Elkader's founders read about the Emir's deeds in a newspaper and decided to name his new community after this great man. The connection was renewed in the 1980s when Mayor Ed Olson and a delegation of townspeople went to Mascara, Algeria, the hometown of the Emir, and officially designated our Sister City connection, which continues today.

Frederique and Brian took their love of food and entertaining and created a dining destination in Elkader. Named after the heroine Scherezade from 1001 Arabian Nights, as well as Frederique's sister, Schera's offers Algerian flavors, along with classic Midwestern dishes, at a wonderful location along the Turkey River in the heart of Clayton County.

Schera's has hosted two Algerian Ambassadors, as well as various political dignitaries including then senator Barack Obama. It has been featured locally, nationally, and internationally in newspapers, magazines, and television including a feature on CNN Headline News.

In September 2011, Frederique left the restaurant to start the Abu Nawas Beverage Co., a craft beer and natural wine distribution company. Today, Schera's continues to provide a unique dining experience to Northeast Iowa. We hope you enjoy your time at Schera's!
